LOSS $25,000 IN GOLD A MYSTERY

Money Strangely Disappears From Vaults San Juan Bank

San Juan, Porto Rico, June 2.—Mystery attaches to the disappearance of $25,000 in gold from the vaults of the Banco Territorial Agrícola, of this city, which officials of the bank today admitted is missing. The bank authorities have replaced this sum out of their personal funds.

According to the statement issued by the officials, the gold, in five bags of $5,000 each, was last counted last December. On another counting of cash on April 20 the five bags were gone. They assert that it would have been impossible for anyone outside of the bank to have abstracted the money. No one connected with the institution has disappeared or been absent from last December until the date on which the loss of the money was discovered.

GLASS OF SALTS IF YOUR KIDNEYS HURT

Eat less meat if you feel Back-achy or have Bladder trouble.

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take, now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Staff Officer Describes A Sidelight Verdun Frag

CAPTURE OF IMPORTANT WOOD BY FRENCH WAS BEAUTIFUL PIECE OF STRATEGY—HEAVY LOSSES SUFFERED BY GERMANS, WHILE ASSAILANTS MADE ONLY AN INSIGNIFICANT SACRIFICE

(By Associated Press.) Behind the Front in Champagne, June 2.—The French troops that made a big dent in the German line just east of Berry-au-Bac and not far from Rheims more than a year ago, and who chafed under the necessity of marking time there ever since, especially since the battle of Verdun began, were allowed the satisfaction recently of attacking a little wood the Germans still held there between the Alsne and the little town of Ville-aux-Bois. This diversion developed an action of considerable importance that did not get into the official communiqué. It has been described to The Associated Press by a staff officer.

The wood, strongly fortified by the Germans, made it impossible, so long as the Teutons held it, for the French to rectify and properly to consolidate their front at that point. When the attack upon Verdun developed great proportions, it was decided to prepare this operation, both as a desirable improvement of the French position and as a diversion. What would have been considered an unprecedented concentration of artillery, both heavy guns and field pieces, before the Verdun operations, was effected immediately behind the front, while the infantry burrowed deeper into their underground shelters. Orders were given for the opening of fire at 7 o'clock on the morning of April 25 and the fire increased in rapidity and intensity until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, the Germans replying feebly until the entire wood was being swept and symptoms of an approaching attack became apparent. Then their heavy pieces from the heights of Craonne began a heavy shelling of the trenches from which an attack might have been supposed to originate.

The French infantry, well protected from this shelling, in their deepened dugouts, waited until the French artillery lengthened the range and swept the approach trenches and soldiers' quarters in the rear of the German position. At half past four the first wave of assailants climbed out of their underground shelter and threw themselves into the wood. All the German remaining in the first line trenches were killed or made prisoners, and the French line proceeded on to the eastern edge of the woods, where they rapidly organized their defenses against the counter-attack. At the same time special detachments explored the interior of the wood, searching subterranean shelters in which German infantry had sought refuge during the bombardment. That operation was soon interrupted; more than two companies of German infantry that the French had passed over in their rush, seeing that their adversaries had reached the eastern edge of the wood, came out of their block houses and dugouts and took the French infantry in the rear. The attacking party was for a moment menaced with envelopment, but, recovering from their surprise, they turned their machine guns upon the assailants taking them in the rear.

Second Infantry Wave. Just then the moment arrived for the advance of the second wave of French infantry. Rushing into the wood at double quick time, this line took the two companies of German infantry in the rear, and the latter now took to the rear, instead of surrounding the first line of French assailants and were themselves enveloped.

A various hand-to-hand struggle ensued; the Germans, seeing the desperation of their situation, tried to escape from the woods to the north; part of them succeeded, but more than 100, entirely surrounded, threw down their arms and surrendered. Search of the wood then revealed hundreds of Germans hidden underground in all corners. Resistance was promptly overcome by the use of hand grenades, and 60 more prisoners were taken from the underground shelters which, on inspection, were found to be marvels of field fortification. They ran from six to eight yards in depth, most of them, and some of them were dug to a depth of ten yards, with such supports that they were able to resist the largest and most powerful projectiles. Entrance and exit from these subterranean quarters. "It is true I am writing a little poetry, but the money that I might get from a book would be of no use to me. What could I do with it? What do I need of the bodily comforts that the money might purchase if they would let me use it? I go all right here in the Tombs and I know that in six, yes, in three months I shall die. I look forward to it with perfect happiness. "Don't you fear there will be a reaction and that between now and the time you die your peace of mind will desert you?"

Has No Nerves, He Suspects. "I have no such fear. You probably will say that I have no such thing as nerves. Sometimes I suspect that such is the case. Now, please don't misunderstand what I have said. There are some who might think that I was talking nonsense. Since I decided to tell all, I gave my confession to the public. I have told the truth."

can forts were facilitated by the arrangement of inclined planes, down which the soldiers would run in case of danger. Wadlases had been provided to lower machine guns during the bombardment and to raise them quickly as soon as the shelling passed.

In the course of this action, a French soldier, separated from his comrades, found himself face to face with several Germans, who threw themselves upon him, darning him, and took him into one of these deep caves. Five other French prisoners were brought there to join him soon afterwards. Their captors offered them sausage and ham, and made a considerable show of treating them generously. While the French prisoners were dispatching the lunch six other Germans precipitated themselves into the shelter, completely demoralized, crying, "Comrades, comrades." The six French prisoners, to the consternation of their captors, immediately constituted themselves the guardians of the twelve Germans and an hour later brought them back to the French lines.

At 6 o'clock in the evening the operations were entirely terminated, the woods completely in the hands of the French, whose losses were insignificant, while everywhere in the woods lay German corpses; and 100 prisoners, of which four were officers and seven subaltern officers of the 101st Saxen regiment, of which the Emperor is the Honorary Chief, were on their way to the rear.

Health Move

Insurance Men At Atlanta Meeting Launch Plans To Better Standards

Atlanta, Ga., June 2.—Executive heads of southern life companies formulated plans for improving health standards and general conditions affecting life insurance in the south at the annual meeting here yesterday, presided over by Edmund Strudwick of Richmond, Va., who is president. Life insurance presidents from many of the southern states were present.

As one means of improving health standards in the south, the Southern States Life Insurance Company of Atlanta, of which William L. Moore is president, has recently inaugurated a movement for state legislatures to appropriate to state boards of health a sum equal to the state's annual revenue from taxes paid by life insurance companies. It is intended that this appropriation shall be in addition to whatever amount may now be appropriated for health work. As the taxes from life companies are only a small part of the receipts from insurance as a whole, each state could easily afford to divert these funds to the work of health authorities, according to the Southern States Life.

For the year ending December 31, 1914, as shown by statistics prepared by the Southern States Life, the life insurance companies paid to the states in taxes the sum of $10,550,837, an average of $215,232 per state. In the same time these states appropriated to the support of their health departments $3,326,020, or an average of $70,766 per state. If all of this life tax fund could be put out for health advancement, says Mr. Moore, it would give a fund in most ways adequate to the service.

ABOUT HOME PRODUCTS.

To advertise goods in the editorial columns of a newspaper is bad policy. There can be no fixed price for such advertising were one so disposed to do it. The right kind of a newspaper never does it, unless it is the way we are now about to do some. This is to stress again how we can produce and sell things out of the ordinary right here at home. And this sort of advertising cannot be bought here. We are just giving it away. You can't put up here any day and shake money at us and as bad as we need it, we are not going to take it for any such notice as this.

Last week mention was made of the excellence of the canned tomatoes offered here last winter by Mr. Thos. L. Taylor. He did not know we were going to do it then and he does not know we are going to do it again. And if he wants to pay for it this is one time his money is no good. Nor are we hinting for a crate of tomatoes next winter. We do want to stress the importance of trying to produce some of these things at home and of giving home folks the preference in buying.

Now for another example. Last year we mentioned the excellence of the home-cured bacon at Mr. Will Atton. It just happened that he did not come around to collect for it till this year but that was his fault not ours. His has sold us again this year. This home-cured bacon, with vegetables from the home garden go mighty fine together. We hope some town folks have read this far because we want to tell something else and that is having room for other things than a side of bacon in the home refrigerator the bulk of it has been put in cold storage at the Greenwood Ice & Coal Company's place and it can be taken out as occasion demands.

None of these are paying for all this, but we are just so eager to build up home enterprises that all this editorial advertising is handed out as a favor rather than to speak. Whenever a man turns up with a home product in hand he will find encouragement in this office—Greenwood Index.

Remedy Prescribed by Many Doctors

Compound of Simple Laxative

Herbs Proves Most Efficient

Dr. W. A. Evans, writing for the Chicago Tribune, makes the assertion that practically everyone at some time or other, suffers from constipation. This applies regardless of age or condition of life.

The congestion of stomach waste in the bowels is evidenced in various ways; bloating, eruption of full stomach, gases, sick headache, languor, all indicate constipation, and call for prompt attention, not only to relieve the present discomfort but also to avoid possible disease that follows neglect of the important function.

Harsh cathartics and violent purgatives should not be employed, as these afford only temporary relief, while they serve to shock the entire system. A mild laxative such as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is far preferable and is now the remedy used and prescribed by many doctors. It is free from opiate or narcotic drugs, acts easily and pleasantly, without gripping or otherwise any pain and is a safe, effective family remedy.

MR. CHAS. SCHELL

Mr. Chas. Schell, 132 Church St., Grenada, Miss., writes that he found relief himself by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and now keeps it on hand for family use. A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin should have a place in every home medicine chest. A trial bottle can be obtained free of charge by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

Satire and Sarcasm.

In "A Modern Columbus," by R. G. Knowles, is this bonnet: At a table in the Lambs club, New York, one evening satire and sarcasm became the subjects of severe criticism among the assembled wisacorns, and the discussion entailed some heated remarks, when the late Charles Hoyt, leaning over, quietly and un-tentiously drawled out a definition and comparison of both that engendered part of his listeners and ended the argument. "Satire," he said, "is like the prick of a needle, but sarcasm is a blow from the fist." George Marston, my host on that occasion, asked, "Well, then, what is wit and humor?" To which Hoyt replied, "The plaster that heals the wounds caused by the other two."

Side Dressing

We have an ideal Fertilizer for Side Dressing Cotton and Corn. It is heavily charged with soda for quick action and then the other ammoniacs in this Side Dressing will continue the growth started up by the soda. These goods are made especially for Side Dressing and is just what the crop needs. A great many people think Cotton will bring a good price next fall. If it does, you will want all you can make. If it should be low you will need all you can make. Side Dressing applied early makes more Cotton; there is no earthly question about that. It brings you in about $3.00 for every dollar you pay out.

It should be applied just as fast as you get your Cotton thinned to a stand and cleaned out.

We are ready with the goods.

The cotton crop is about 15 days late at this time. Side dressing may prove unusually profitable this year if we have an early frost.
